The Heart of Hong Kong’s Business District

The Central Business District serves many of the most dynamic companies on the planet. Students from Munsang College called on Hong Kong Land as part of the Chamber’s Business-Schools Partnership Programme recently to find out what makes the heart of this business hub tick. By Eric Chan

“A well-maintained work environment is crucial for nurturing creativity and increasing efficiency of workers,” said Tommy Au, Human Resources Manager of Hong Kong Land, which made me realize why, when growing up, my mother would yell from one end of the apartment to the other, nagging me to clean my room.

Some 30 fourth and fifth form students from Munsang College were invited for a company visit at Hong Kong Land on February 1, as part of the Business-Schools Partnership Programme, organized by the Chamber, where they gained new perspectives on the workplace place environment.

Hong Kong Land is one of Asia’s leading property investment, management and development groups. This is the eighth consecutive year that the corporation has participated in the Business-Schools Partnership Programme, which provides outstanding students hands-on experience, and is recognised as an international city.

“Among the complex’s shop arrangements and the importance of customer service in particular. In addition to organization skills, Tommy also encouraged students to develop their time-management skills.”

“This was the first of two activities planned to give students first-hand experience in the corporate world and how Hong Kong has developed as an international city.”

Munsang College 民生書院

Munsang College is a co-educational school founded in 1926. The school’s mission is to offer students a holistic education and nurture a positive outlook on life. Apart from the academic development of students inside the classroom, the school also promotes additional learning experiences through community service, cultural and local exchanges with students associations. This marks the third year that the school has participated in the Business-Schools Partnership Programme.

A first-hand experience is crucial for fostering students’ awareness of and commitment to Hong Kong’s rich culture and history.
